LOVELY MOMENTS

There lies a she, sun, and a he, moon there;
She gives the best light to his sphere;
On each is born, and all, and so
They unto one another nothing owe;
And yet they co, but are
So just, and rich in that care, when they are,
That neither want, nor needs to bear, nor stay;
He then desires to be spared nor to spare,
They outdo any other debt, and then
Take no acquaintances, but are again;
They pay, they give, they lend, and so be full
No such occasion to be liberal.
More truth, more courage in these two do shine,
Than all thy turtles have and sparrows, Valentine.
